Fort Ord changeover to affect entire Peninsula

By ROBERT MISKIMON

The transition of Fort Ord to the home of the 7th Infantry Division promises to create reverberations throughout the entire economy, social life and character of the Monterey Peninsula.

With a total of 66,000 persons attached to the Fort Ord community, that makes it the largest of the communities on the Monterey Peninsula. Although training is still the basic mission of Fort Ord, its population in the coming year will be generally older, higher paid, and with a higher proportion of families.

As with any other major change in the fabric of society, the transition will produce both bad and good side-effects. There will, for example, undoubtedly be a boost to the local economy because of the influx of army dollars.

At the same time, it is expected that the demand for housing will impact heavily upon rental units, and the private sector of the economy from Seaside to Salinas will have to absorb the demand.

Still, many of the effects of the change are unknown and will remain unknown until the transition is completed during the coming year.

"We're authorized to fill to 5,800 personnel in fiscal year 1975," explained Maj. J.D. Coleman, public information officer. "We probably won't reach that full strength here until late July and early August."

There are now 4,600 persons attached to the 7th Division now at Fort Ord, and the additional influx toward the end of the summer will be brought about by the fact a freeze on travel allowances will delay the arrival of the additional personnel.

The long-range plan for the base, dependent upon the proper Congressional approval, is for the number of 7th Division personnel to increase next year from 5,800 to a total of 11,000. By June 30, 1976, the army expects to have two-thirds of an infantry division at Fort Ord.

The remaining third of the division will be comprised of National Guard Troops, who will not be connnected with the base directly.

In terms of direct financial impact upon the community, this means that the military payroll in Monterey County will jump by some $25 million next year.

The present military payroll for fiscal year 1975 is $156 million; that's expected to increase to $175 million next year. A total of $50 million is the Army's civilian payroll to its employes

"The total fiscal impact for all things will be $242 million to this county," Coleman estimated.

Although Fort Ord's primary mission remains basic training, by March of 1976 that function will be disestablished. The 4th Advanced Individual Training Brigade is still located at the base, and the 3rd Basic Combat Training Brigade now has a strength of 18 companies.

"By April 1, 1976, we will have eliminated all basic training at Fort Ord," Coleman said.

The change at Fort Ord is in line with a change in the philosophy of the Army about by the late Gen. Crieghton Abrams to locate training for specialized functions within the Army to those bases best equipped to handle it. Thus, Army personnel who will specialize in armor, for example, receive their basic training at Fort Knox, Tenn. Instead of to Fort Ord.

And, in connection with the establishment of an all-volunteer Army, recruitment has been underway for some time to bring personnel to Fort Ord. Army brochures describe "The California Experience" here as "a unique mixture of job and recreational opportunities...

"California is a virtual cornucopia of recreational opportunities and Fort Ord is strategically right in the heart of this horn of plenty."

The coming of the 7th Division to Fort Ord is not without historical precedents. The outfit was stationed at Fort Ord in 1943 before going to the Aleutian Islands in World War II with Gen. Joseph Stilwell. It remained in Korea until 1971, when it was made inactive. But the division was reactivated last year.

The 7th Division is primarily a rifle division, and its main weapon is the M-16 rifle. Concerns have been voiced on the Monterey Peninsula about possible adverse noise that would be generated. The weaponry that will be used by the division at Fort Ord is no different from that which has been used in the past, Coleman said.

"There won't be anything heard that is different from what was heard before," he said.

The heavy artillery which will be used for training, including mortars, recoilless rifles, and cannons, will be fired at Camp Roberts, at the far end of the Salinas Valley. There will be no tracked vehicles used in the division; all will be wheeled. A total of 3,200 vehicles will be used by the 7th Division.

The aviation battallion attached to the division will use some troop carrier helicopters, but all landings will be at Fritsche Airfield, and "the people on the Peninsula won't

Students arranged displays of the various ethnic cultures, in the hallway, and then presented song and dance programs in native costumes on the playground. City conducts door-to-door survey of community priorities and needs

Seaside's first comprehensive, door-to-door survey of community needs is now in full swing and will continue for a couple of months as interviewers gather information vital to planning and city administration.

Not only is it the first survey of its kind ever done in Seaside, it's the first of the saturation surveys being conducted in Monterey County by cities in connection with a new type of federal grant system.

Under the new community development block grant program begun this year, communities such as Seaside are required to implement thorough needs assessments in order to conduct planning activities for the social portion of the program.

The needs and values of every resident of Seaside are being noted in depth, and this information will then be collected and analyzed by the city's planning department in drawing up a proposed social element to the city's general plan--one that truly reflects the needs of the community.

Other uses to which the information will be put are to help update Seaside's housing element, to update the Monterey County transportation plan, to assist the city in applying for state and federal grants, and to aid city planners in drawing up parks and recreation programs, economic studies, and other related functions.

The interviewers began their door-to-door survey in early May and will visit all of the approximately 7,000 households in Seaside by the time the survey has been completed. As of last week, about 1,000 households had been visited.

The average length of time required for completion of the questionnaire is 20 minutes, and the confidential information concerns the number of persons living in the household, their ages and occupations, the length of time the individuals have resided in Seaside and at their present address, whether or not the home is rented or owned, the amount of monthly payments for housing, the number of vehicles owned by persons in the household, whether residents are active or retired military, and questions concerning the location of the family doctor, shopping patterns, income and employment status.

INTERVIEWER Penny McNeer (far left) conducted a needs assessment last week with Jeanette Dodd of 1621 Soto as part of the city's door-to-door questionnaire. Supervising the activities of the interviewers is Dick Christie (right), social service supervisor with the city. (John Perkins photo).

The surveys are being conducted by 10 Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) employes attached to the city of Seaside, under the direction of the city planning department. The interviewers are from all age groups, from teenagers to 60-year-olds; they include men and women and various ethnic groups.

They work in morning and afternoon shifts of four since some of the CETA employes are still involved with activities in the public schools in the mornings. The survey started in the area north of La Salle, east of Fremont Boulevard, west of Noche Buena and south of Seaside High School. It will proceed in a gradual southerly direction until the entire city is covered.

At the start of the survey, one interviewer was assigned a large portion of the city, but experience showed that the workers were happier and more efficient working in groups, said John Carlson, associate city planner.

"The team goes into an enumeration district to make the survey, and if no one is

Council side-steps antenna issue

The city council has diplomatically avoided becoming embroiled in a controversy over whether citizen's band radio antennas are permitted in the Del Monte Heights Redevelopment Project.

The council asked City Atty. Carey Royster for his opinion on whether they are permitted in the ownership contracts signed between residents and the Seaside Redevelopment Agency.

At last week's regular council meeting, the question arose as to whether large television antennas were permitted within Del Monte Heights, and whether those stipulations also apply to the citizen's band radio antennas.

Royster said his interpretation of the contract language is that all exposed, enternal antennas are prohibited by the agreements.

"I feel that the contract language would be found by a court as barring all outside antennas in the project, and not television antennas alone," Royster said.

Ed Porter of 1666 Mescal spoke to the council on behalf of the other "ham" radio operators in Seaside. He argued that limiting antennas was tantamount to eliminating citizen's band communications from the city.

"There are thousands of CB antennas in Seaside, and only 27 in Del Monte Heights," Porter said. "If you underground utilities, you might someday eliminate all communications in Seaside."

Porter said the average length of a citizen's band antenna is 17 feet, but they must be located atop the structure in order to be effective.

"I'm completely in sympathy with you," said Mayor B.J. Dolan, "but you have three neighbors who are complaining about your antenna, specifically."

"I wasn't aware that I was in violation of the law," Porter said. "The deed said no television antennas...and nothing about citizen's band."

Councilman Oscar Lawson pleaded with the council to give a liberal interpretation to the wording of the contract, and not to take any action that would prohibit the use of CB antennas.

"This is an example where good common sense is not being used," Lawson said.

Councilman Joe Cota recalled that a general plan was drafted and adopted by the Redevelopment Agency, including a 17-foot height limit on antennas, primarily for maintaining esthetic standards and insuring a view to residents. He encouraged those residents with a problem concerning antennas to go to the Redevelopment Agency, and reminded the council that hearings are held whenever a request for an antenna is made.

Dolan urged those with citizen's band antennas in violation of the 17-foot height limitation to look into telescoping antennas that can be extended when in use, at night, and then compressed when not in use.

In a separate matter, the council debated the formation of a library committee to work with the administration of the new public library nearing completion near Seaside city hall.

City Mgr. Dudley Lapham noted that the city of Seaside is basically providing the building, while the country is providing the staff, maintenance personnel, and related services. "The internal operation of the library will be a county operation," he said.

Councilman Steve Ross expressed concern in totally relegating all authority for operation of the library to the county, and suggested that councilmen be briefed by an "expert" on the function of a library so they could become more knowledgeable.

"I don't want our city council to get itself into the position where we're telling them how to run their library," said Councilman Joe Cota. "I suggest possibly a 'Friends of the Library' type thing. I will support it in that way."

Dolan reminded the council that the library is also to serve the adjacent cities of Del Rey Oaks and Sand City, and their responsibilities for maintenance will eventually be translated into a cost to those cities per capita population.

"I don't think we should go in there and make this into a can of worms before it gets off the ground," said Councilman Oscar Lawson, cautioning the council against hasty action.

"We have people here in Seaside capable of performing that job," Councilman Glenn Olea said. "The city council must urge the county to employ our own people to work in the library."

The city council also adopted its preliminary budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year, a budget that has no tax increase but a shrunken reserve amount of $505,822. The total amount of the budget is $3,290,552.

"We're not balancing our budget," said Cota with alarm. "In two more years, we'll be broke if we go through another year like this."

Cota also expressed concern that, if federal funds made available for public service positions in the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) are discontinued, the city will be in a position of either discharging those employes or finding money for their salaries from its own revenues.

"It looks like we'll have to do some radical things in the future to keep things up," Cota said.

"My first year on the council, we had about a quarter million dollars in reserves, and I thought that was a little high," Lawson said. "But if we hadn't had it, we'd be broke by now."

"I'm afraid that after the election of 1976, we don't know what will happen with revenue sharing," Olea said. "I urge the city to spend on a needy basis, because the next fiscal year will be crucial for all of us."

Councilman Steve Ross said he was concerned that any cutbacks in the fiscal picture be distributed evenly among all segments of the city's population, if they are to be made.

The council heard an appeal for assistance from Walt Addision of 1436 Yosemite, on behalf of the Ladies and Gentlemen's Riders Club of Seaside, a motorcycle club. He said their efforts to find a clubhouse had been continually frustrated, and asked for council help.

"Motorcycle riders in the past have, for some reason, gotten a bad name," Addision said. "The places where people will rent to us are places where the zoning isn't right."

Mayor B.J. Dolan referred Addision to the Monterey Peninsula Board of Realtors for assistance.

The council also received a request for $6,387 by the Seaside Alcoholism Recovery Association for assistance in the coming fiscal year, and took it under consideration.

Two ordinances designating underground utility districts in the Laguna Grande Project were also approved, as well as an offer from Saul M. Weingarten for the city to purchase a 4.2-acre parcel of land within the boundaries of the project for park and open sapce.

The city will put $15,000 down in the parcel by July 1, and amortize the remaining $45,000 of purchase price at an 8 per cent interest rate. Weingarten offered to negotiate the purchase of the property at no profit to himself, because of his

A remembrance of things past

TWENTY YEARS AGO
From the Seaside News-Sentinel
June 9, 1955

Last week's city council meeting bristled with ill-concealed discord, as Seaside legislators exchanged salvos charging "secret meetings" and attempts to hamper council action.

Chief gladiators of the verbal battle were Councilmen George D. Pollack and John Craige, with Mayor Oldemeyer and Councilman Joe Cota cast in the role of secondary combatants.

Triggering the hassle was a sharp attack by Councilman Craige on the police department budget for the next fiscal year.

Councilman Pollack proposed a budget of $78,081.18 that called for a city police force of 16 officers and one clerical employe. Pollack, praising the department's work, told the council: "You can not expect proper protection without an adequately staffed police force."

A complete reconsideration of the police master plan was proposed by Councilman Craige. He opened his criticism of the budget, saying that the police should be "pared down to the level of other city services."

Bitter Words Are Aftermath of Controversy

Councilman Pollack contends that it is the aim of his four colleagues to drive him off the city council.

Pollack claims that through various harassments and attempts to embarass him, the other councilmen are bent on forcing his resignation.

He sees three essential reasons for the alleged effort to remove him from the city's legislative body: his stewardship of the police department, his interest in the community garbage service, and his ownership of the East Monterey Water Service.

Mayor Oldemeyer makes the following reply to Councilman Pollack's allegations:

Regarding the charge of councilmen wanting tickets "taken care of" Mayor Oldemeyer states that an investigation by him found no basis for these accusations. Oldemeyer told the News-Sentinel: "I demand that Councilman Pollack name the councilmen involved so that I may take proper action."

Oldemeyer also denied the existence of any attempt to remove Pollack from his office of chairmanship of the Public Safety Committee. "Since, as mayor, I appointed Councilman Pollack to the chairmanship, I could also remove him from that post if I considered it necessary," Oldemeyer declared.

Regarding the so-called garbage issue, Oldemeyer admits that he called a meeting of Councilmen Craige, Cota and Cunningham to which the press was not invited.

"My reasons," Oldemeyer asserts, "were to state to Mr. Pollack and Mr. White (a partner in the community garbage service) personally our findings first-hand, rather than making a public announcement."

According to the mayor, the meeting agreed that the city should have a regulatory and compulsory garbage ordinance, "making it a lien on property, setting a rate, and setting a service."

Prologue

With this issue, management of the News-Sentinel changes hands.

Accordingly, a few words of self-introduction may be appropriate.

I am happy to be in California, excited by the challenge of serving a new and dynamic city.

To publish his own paper is the dream of virtually every newspaperman. In my case, it is a dream that not only survived the sovering years of military service and colle but that emerged stronger than ever after a considerable period of plying the newsman's trade in Washington, D.C.

Almost a year has passed since my wife and I actively began to look for a newspaper; a year of traveling thousands of miles, visiting scores of communities in many different sections of the country.

It was worth it, every dusty mile, every discouraging day, now that the search is done. We are sure that this is the community in which we want to live. We hope you will allow us to become a part of it. As a newspaper, we shall have two goals, equally important: to be an instrument of service to Seaside and its people, and to tell the truth.

SEASIDE FORUM

To the Editor:

Seaside is populated by a lot of poor people--women who do not have a dollar to buy exemption, or a dollar to buy material to make old fashioned clothes for themselves, even if they can sew.

Are these people to be publicly embarrassed? Is the infringement of people's personal rights a fitting manner in which to celebrate Independence Day?

By whose authority are women to be publicly humiliated because they can not afford clothes they do not possess? They need every dollar to feed their families. Who is to enforce this arbitrary edict? The police? (I respect our chief of police, John Davis, too highly to believe it.)

The arts as social therapy

(EDITORIAL)

The Seaside Performing Arts Association, having just presented its first set of plays of local production, is now faced with the dilemma of most neophyte cultural organizations. It is broke.

That's a sorry state of affairs, not just for the Performing Arts Association, but for the entire community. Seaside, as Bedford Vaghn, director of the organization points out, is a virtual gold mine of untapped talent in the performing arts.

One of the objectives of the organization has been to use the performing arts both for instructive and esthetic purposes as well as for socially refining outlets. In other words, if the young people of Seaside can put their energies to good use in dramatics, then there should be a reduction of crime, delinquency and drug-related problems.

In theory, like so many other good causes, this sounds fine. Practically any so-called "expert" who is asked, would no doubt agree that the arts can be a healthy outlet for youthful energies that can be too easily mis-spent.

Fine. But where's the support necessary to get this program off the ground? The Seaside Performing Arts Association has requested funds of the city council, and there seems at least a fair chance that the funds might be approved from community development block grant monies, but not until later in the summer.

Meanwhile, the performing arts go begging. The organization is overextended, both in terms of manhours and finances, and the few volunteers who have done virtually all the work so far are exhausted and discouraged. The Del Rey Theatre will soon become vacant again unless rent is paid, too.

The simple fact is that support must be garnered from local business, if the Seaside Performing Arts Association is to survive. That is as it should be, since the whole concept of the organization is to get the total community involved in a meaningful way with the performing arts.

Those in the business and professional community who have stood back, waiting to see if the Seaside Performing Arts Association can establish any sort of track record before making a helpful gesture on their own, should perhaps re-examine their motives.

The question needs to be asked whether monies spent on such a program are not put to better use in a more efficient manner toward the objective of crime prevention--not to mention the enrichment of the community's cultural life-than all the police and judicial functions of society.

Or, to put it another way, is it not cheaper and more humanitarian to spend some money today on a positive, creative program to involve the youth of the area with the performing arts, than to spend much more, through taxes, on expanded police protection, the judicial system, drug rehabilitative programs, and the whole array of remedial measures devised by society when things run amuck?

In any event, why not give the Seaside Performing Arts Association a helping hand in its moment of need, so it can at least have the chance to prove itself to the community?

Letter

DEAR EDITOR

With reference to the opinions recently expressed in this column by Mr. Melvin T. Mason, I wish to say the following: During the time Mr. Mason served Monterey High School as an Intergroup Relations Assistant, he had reason to know that channels exist to appeal decisions made by any of the assistant principals serving under my direction.

Mr. Mason also had reason to know that in turn my decisions as principal are subject to appeal at the district level. To my knowledge, no appeals regarding alleged cases of the sort referred to by Mr. Mason were ever directed to me. Certainly, he himself while employed at Monterey High School never made reference to matters of the sort he has referred to in the letter.

Second, during his employment here, he had every reason to know that I personally put a high premium on equity, on the rights of all, students and adults alike, to a fair hearing in any matter where disagreements are found, whatever the issue or complaint. Parents in the community have reason to know this also.

He also knows from experience that the administration at Monterey High School does not act willfully or capriciously, but is instead thorough and thoughtful in reaching decisions. And especially does Mr. Mason have reason to know that a decision regarding the possible transfer of a student to the continuation high school (Cypress High) is made following the advice and counsel of an objective review board.

Such a review board consists of representatives of the teaching and counseling staff, one of the Intergroup Relations Assistants, and an administrator other than the one recommending transfer. Mr. Mason has himself served on such a review board here and should know from experience that recommendations for transfer are based upon considerable data and are reached after thoughtful reflection. I never knew him to take exception to a consensus reached by such a board.

If there are instances where the parents of any student at Monterey High School feel that their child is being unfairly treated, I certainly stand ready to meet with them to review the facts and to attempt to resolve the problem if in fact there is one.

Impact of the 7th Division

notice our presence as much as the people in Salinas," Colemans said.

By June 22, two more batallions will be activated, and when 55 per cent of total personnel have arrived, the 7th Division will be activated officially. Until then, most of the chores at the base involve housekeeping functions and preparing for activation.

One of the major differences in the transition at Fort Ord is the length of stay. The average stay for the basic recruit was eight weeks; most of the people in the 7th Division will be here for at least 16 months. Their pay scales will be higher, and they will spend more money on goods und services relating to families.

Housing will naturally be at a premium, but Army officials feel the shortfall is basically a civilian problem, and real estate and governmental people believe it's basically an Army problem.

There are now about 9,000 Army dependents on the post and an equal number off. The Army estimates it will need 1,800 dwelling units off-base this year, and another 1,000 or so next year. By June 30, 1976, the need for off-base housing is estimated at 2,500 dwelling units.

"Basically, it's a civilian problem," Coleman declared.

Because of the critical need for housing, the Army eliminated its housing allowance to single men at Fort Ord in an effort to encourage them to live on the base. Those who want may still live off base, but without the housing allowance. That may have eased the housing situation somewhat, but it's had certain side-effects, too.

"There's no question about it," Major Coleman observed, "it's had a dampening effect on 'The California Experience.' "

Coleman said the Army is not trying to encourage the Peninsula to engage in a rash of sudden building as a stopgap solution to the housing need and thus to degrade the esthetic standards of the community.

"Our official position," he said, "is that we're not asking the civilian community to do anything but be aware of the problem."

One civilian who is well aware of the housing situation as it relates to the 7th Division is Dick Challis, Seaside realtor and president of the Monterey Peninsula Board of Realtors.

"There is terrific strain on rentals in the area," he said. "The rental situation has been a little rugged, and we have felt more activity due to the 7th Division."

Challis believes there will continue to be a good market for rentals on the Peninsula, but he does not foresee any "price gouging in rentals." Challis believes the demand for inexpensive housing created by the 7th Division will be equally absorbed by the Peninsula and by Salinas.

"The problem is the Army's," Challis said.

"My solution would be, instead of the Army building housing there at Fort Ord, to subsidize them so they could bring their families here," Challis said.

A committee composed of the mayors of all the cities on the Monterey Peninsula is examining the housing problem in an effort to come up with possible solutions.

Burke Pease, manager of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, believes the housing shortage is as much due to the prevalence of a no-growth philosophy and high land costs as because of the 7th Division.

"They've just compounded a housing problem," Pease said. Pease believes the merchants in the community who have catered to the younger recruit who is here for a shorter period of time "will be hurt, unless they change" to meet the needs of the new population.

At the same time, he envisions the 7th Division personnel spending more money on such things as major appliances, autos, and other goods relating to family needs.

"This will definitely be beneficial to the area," Pease said. "When you consider the other possibility--shutting down the base--this is much better."

There is another area where the change in makeup of the Fort Ord population should have a significant impact: the high incidence of veneral disease in Monterey County.

"With the more stable, older, married population, you should have less of a VD problem," said Joan Clayton, public health officer with the Monterey County Health Department. The high transiency rate in this county (both because of the military and because of the farm worker population) is known to be one factor in the high VD rate.

"The military isn't by itself the main source of our VD problem--is's the younger population. But the people coming in the 7th Division are less likely to be a high risk group, as far as VD is concerned," Ms. Clayton said.

Of special concern to health officials is the rise in the rate of reported cases of gonorrhea from 642 per 100,000 population in 1973 to 786 per 100,000 in 1974.

The Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, which usually educates most of the children of service personnel stationed at Fort Ord, doesn't anticipate a huge impact on enrollment because of the 7th Division.

Neil Fearn, assistant superintendent in charge of administration in the district, said a drop in enrollment is still anticipated for next year. In post schools, at approximately the same rate of decline as in the last two years.

"We don't feel that a tremendous growth will come to us," Fearn said. "We will not receive a significant number of new students, and we feel we can handle them on post schools. The housing is 95 to 98 per cent filled and the enrollment projection hasn't been met, except at Patton School."

The 7th Infantry Division Band marches in the Torrance Armed Forces Day Parade. The band, under the baton of Warrant Officer Tom Davis and led by Drym Major Ray Austin, will be a featured part of Ft. Ord's observation of the Army's 200th birthday. The Army birthday party will be held at Fritzsche Airfield, just off Reservation Road in Marina. The Airfield will be the scene - from 9:30 a.m. till 4 p.m. - of a series of events calculated to please the young and the old. There will be static displays, sky diving, a pipers march, a youth parade, a military assistance to safety and traffic (MAST) demonstration, a parade of history, and amilitary review. Refreshments will be available and some 10,000 people are expected at this 200th birthday party.

Army to celebrate bicentennial

A 200th birthday is cause for a celebration and Fort Ord intends to do it right. June 14 will mark the Army's 200th anniversary and the public is invited to join in the festivities.

The activities will begin at 4 p.m. Friday, June 13. History will pass-in-review at the Headquarters Paradefield in a special Flag Pageant Retreat Ceremony. Included in the review will be colonial and historical state flags and historical uniforms.

An open house at Fritzsche Airfield on Saturday, June 14 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. will be the main event of the celebration. The open house will open and close with a sky diving performance. Included in the schedule will be a pipers' march, youth parade, and a special Parade of History with floats.

The Association of the United States Army will hold a military ball the evening of June 14 at Stilwell Hall beginning at 6:30 p.m. Reservations must be obtained from the Information Office here in advance and cost $6 per person.

On Sunday, June 15, the Presidio of Monterey will close out the weekend with a Memorial Service at 4 p.m.

The public is welcome at all the events scheduled.

Elections slated for community services

Elections for low-income representatives to the Monterey County Community Services Commission will be held during the last two weeks of June. One representative will be elected at a town hall meeting in each of the five supervisorial districts.

Anyone may be elected from the district where he lives, and anyone may vote whose income is below federal poverty guidelines. The elections are in the form of town hall meetings, with individuals and organizations representing the poor being given an opportunity to present candidates for a seat on the commission.

Montery County Community Services Department will provide free coffee, translation, and transportation. Transportation may be arranged for in advance by calling 758-3381 or 899-3774.

The Community Services Commission advises the Board of Supervisors in all matters concerning the Community Services Department. The town hall meetings provide an opportunity for anyone interested in the Department's programs (senior citizens, transportation, manpower, Operation Brownbag, etc.) to find out about them, or to express their own opinions.

The League of Women Voters, Monterey Peninsula and Salinas chapters, will conduct the elections, to assure impartiality and that candidates are elected by and truly represent the low-income people in the district.

The Commission is excited by the fact that the Town Hall concept of government can still work so well and points with pride to the very active poor representatives elected at previous Town Hall meetings. Those now serving as elected representatives of the poor are:

District 1: Raymond Jimenez, Castroville; 2: Arthur Lomas, Salinas; 3: Mrs. Irene Serrano, Soledad; 4: Henry Burney, Seaside; 5: Mrs. Robbie Sepolen, Monterey.

The Seaside meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Monday June 16 at the Seaside Adult Center, 972 Hilby St. in Seaside.

BDM awarded

BDM was awarded a $3.2 million contract Tuesday to provide the scientific support laboratory for the Army Combat Developments Experimentation Command. The one year contract takes effect July 1. BDM has provided the support to CDEC since October, 1971.

Formerly Braddock, Dunn and McDonald, the scientific contractor legally changed its name earlier this year to the acronym - BDM. Daniel F. McDonald of Carmel, one of the three organizers of the company, will continue as director of the local laboratory.

The contract covers scientific, technical and maintenance services in support of experimentation which will be scheduled by CDEC during the fiscal year 1976.

Work is concentrated at Fort Ord and the instrumented field laboratory at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

MEALS NEED WHEELS

The St. Francis Xavier Parish Hall hot lunch site for senior citizens has been discontinued. Meals on Wheels, sponsor of the hot lunch program, is seeking a new site in Seaside closer to public bus service.

Seaside Post direction assumed by Robert and Christine Miskimon

Direction of both editorial and advertising functions of The Seaside Post News-Sentinal was transferred this week to Robert and Christine Miskimon.

Their first goal is to make the newspaper a true community service, by recognizing and responding to the needs of the Seaside and Monterey Peninsula community. The resident of the Peninsula who cares about the community, the schools, the environment, and quality of life, is the individual to whom the Post will be most meaningful in the months ahead.

Robert and Christine have been involved with newspapers for nearly 10 years, in practically all corners of the western world. Robert was a reporter for The Daily News of the Virgin Islands in St. Thomas where their first child, Elizabeth, was born. Then, he gained further news experience as an editor with The Associated Press in New Haven, Conn.

The Miskimons moved to California in 1968, where Robert assumed the editorship of two weekly newspapers on the San Francisco Peninsula-- The Los Altos News and the Mountain View News-Herald.

Robert then joined Salinas Californian, where he reported on politics, education, the farm labor movement, and a host of other areas for two years.

At long last, the Miskimons found a home on the Monterey Peninsula, where their second daughter, Mae, was born two years ago. The editorship of The Carmel Pine Cone was offered Robert, and he gladly accepted.

In that position, Robert gained invaluable tutoring in the importance of a community newspaper--one that belongs to the people of a community because it reflects their deepest concerns and beliefs. The Miskimons both believe that the strength of a community is determined by the strength of its newspaper, and the degree to which that newspaper serves the community.

That's why both Miskimons come to The Seaside Post News-Sentinel, with conviction that all the concerns of the Seaside area, and of the Monterey Peninsula, can be recognized and aired with the proper amount of responsibility, in the vehicle of a community weekly newspaper.

All members of the community are invited to participate in the challenging task that lies ahead: to make this newspaper into what the people themselves want, while maintaining high standards of journalism.

It seems more than coincidental that exactly 20 years ago this week, as noted in the historical column elsewhere in this week's issue, the ownership of the News-Sentinel also changed hands. We share the enthusiasm Kurt Hartmann and his wife must have felt upon embarking on the adventure of a weekly newspaper. And we hope our readers, too, will share in this challenge and will help us to make the Post into the kind of newspaper you want. After all, that's the only reason we have for being here.

People in the community with ideas, suggestions, complaints are encouraged to let us hear from you. We believe that this unique and beautiful community deserves nothing less than a unique and beautiful newspaper. With your help, we'll provide it.

Simply put: more cars being driven farther. Mileage declined as cars increased in weight and added power-consuming accessories.

New courses offered locally

Two new courses have been added to the Monterey Adult School's summer class schedule at Monterey High School, beginning June 16.

Stained Glass will meet each Monday and Wednesday evening from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. The instructor, Steve Koelzer, a local artist, will introduce students to basic methods of cutting and assembling windows, lampshades, jewelry, and other forms of stained glass.

The course will offer examples and techniques for designing and making attractive pieces of art, including soldering, pattern making and copper foiling -- a technique used by Louis Tiffany. Students must furnish own tools and equipment.

Also scheduled is a class in home decorative arts and crafts which will include dough-art, macrame pot hangers, decal-it and other popular crafts. This class will be taught by Ella Elsemore each Tuesday evening from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Interested persons may enroll during evenings hours at the Monterey Adult School office or at the first class session. Call 649-7336 for further information.

GAS WATCHER QUIZ

Has the increase in the cost of foreign oil had an adverse effect on the economy of the USA?

Yes. In 1974 we had a trade deficit of more than $5-billion compared to a $5-million surplus a year earlier. That's money lost to other nations instead of being circulated here to overcome unemployment, inflation, and recession.

Three musicians honored

Three musicians with more than a half-century of service between them to their church were honored in a special ceremony Sunday, June 1 at Hays C.M.E. Church in Seaside.

Eloise Wells, pianist; Sam Brown, organist; and Robert Sloan, director of the choir, were presented with plaques by The Rev. Wellington Smith, founder of the church. About 100 members of the congregation were in attendance.

Eloise Wells joined the church in 1956 and served as pianist for the senior choir for 19 years. Later, she was pianist for the youth choir and she is a past member of the Monterey Organ Club. Mrs. Hays is a tax accountant and was born and raised in Providence, Ky.

Sam Brown became a member of the church in 1959, during his final tour of duty with the Army at Fort Ord. After retirement, he moved to the Monterey Peninsula and became very active in the church. Brown hails from Charleston, S.C.

Brown serves as organist, and contributes his time and money to make improvements in Hays Church. He also serves as president of the Steward Board and of the Board of Trustees. He has also been active with Easter Seals, the Seaside Kiwanis, the Alliance on Aging, and the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

Robert Sloan, a native of Meridian, Miss., joined the church in 1956 after his transfer to Fort Ord in 1955. He has directed the senior choir for 19 years, and, during a military break in Vietnam, was appointed musical director for the 17th Air Cavalry Battalion and devotional leader for religious services. Sloan raised thousands of dollars to build Hays Chapel and furnish it, raising $10,000 to match another $10,000 advanced by the annual conference.

Christian Scientist hear discussion of values

The victimizing effects of materialism need to be countered with spiritual power, the members of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts were told last week.

"Obedience to God's law," declared incoming Chairman of The Christian Science Board of Directors, Otto Bertschi, "illumines individual consciousness and saves the individual from the fearful contemporary picture of vast public and private institutions, against which ordinary men and women too often feel helpless and ineffective."

Bertschi is the first overseas member of the denomination's administrative governing board. A native of Zurich, he served as a Christian Science practitioner, teacher, and lecturer in the years leading to his election to the Board in 1972. He was Christian Science Committee on Publication for German-speaking Switzerland from 1957-1963. He recently visited branch churches in central and southern Africa. There are more than 3,000 branches of The Mother Church in 57 countries.

"It is vital that we separate the hypnotic claims of material power," the chairman said, "from the true power that belongs to God." He said "divine power always acts through spiritual illumination." Mr. Bertschi urged all members to reaffirm the spiritual power of Christianity, calling for "new vision to match new challenges."

An estimated 12,000 members, including a number of Christian Scientists from Northern California heard the keynote speech. There are 363 branches of The Mother Church in California, according to Mrs. Hattie M. Esty, Monterey.

Jules Cern of New York City was named President of The Mother Church for the coming year. He succeeds Mrs. Georgina Tennant of London who had been President for the past year.

A new Century Edition of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, was announced at the meeting. It honors the 100th anniversary of the first edition of the book. Also announced were forthcoming translations of the textbook into Japanese and Indonesian.

The theme of the meeting, the 80th Annual Meeting in the history of The Mother Church, was "The Power of God's Word."

MYSTIC MOON

ASTRO-FUN-OLOGY
June 11-17

EXUBERANT ARIES March 21 - April 20: Watch energy as your plans for summer vacations may not include personal relaxation. Old problems may arise in the home base once again of a financial nature...these two will pass away. Sudden outbursts from partners, business as well as marriage, could have been triggered by something done by you?

DETERMINED TAURUS April 21 - May 21: Opportunities for a new job may be in the offing...weigh all sides of the situation before giving up what you have for the promise you can't realize yet. Outside conflict could give you the feeling of being alone, a personal problem may be weighing on your heart and mind...try to please yourself as this is where happiness and satisfaction can be accomplished. Something purchased for the home will not afford a burden of expense, just joy and a sense of satisfaction...how long have you really wanted it?

VERSATILE GEMINI May 22 - June 21: Stop talking and listen to yourself...others have to. Many times you expound on subjects that you really haven't done too much research upon. Others may be "poking fun" at you for taking your time in making a decision, "right on"..after all it's your happiness at stake. Suggest you take more time in "reading the fine print" on contracts of any nature during the next few weeks....time must never be wasted just well spent.

EXOTIC MOON CHILD June 22 - July 23: Your inner feelings will be giving you hunches to follow...suggest you pay attention as your inner self is trying to tell you something. An old personal problem may be peeking into your life again...you thought you had solved this one and put it awa ..No way, it wasn't taken care of to the finalized point, this time will see it gone for good. Watch the diet you could be eating just to escape and become more frustrated by this than a direct approach to any situation.

REGAL LEO July 24 - August 23: The opposite sex may be baiting you at this time for what reasons only you will know and you could have the feeling that females are holding you back from accomplishing a personal goal now. Suggest you don't try to continue to please them as they are in a mood that won't allow them to be pleased...continue to "do your own thing." Any health problem, no matter how large or small, needs attention for peace of mind, if no other reason.

DISCRIMINATING VIRGO August 24 - Sept. 23: The financial Ups and Downs of to-days world are apt to throw you off schedule budgetwise...have a nest egg for a "rainy day" in case the "rainy day" last too long...a stock pile for ready cash IS A must for you for the next three months. Opportunities for voicing your constructive aspects on the career level will be received and acted upon shortly...those in charge of the operation are tired of negative criticism.

ELEGANT LIBRA Sept. 24 - Oct. 23: Hold on to your personal dignity..others might try to throw you for a loop emotionally and stay in there for they aren't thinking past their own feelings. Others may appear not too tactful in their criticism of you and your activities turn a deaf ear on them for your inner feelings tell you which is right or which is wrong...for you! You appear quite restless at this time and if the opportunity offers itself for a change of some sort, do it if not just to improve the furniture, get a new hairdo; change the time scheduling as it will break the monotony.

SENSUAL SCORPIO Oct. 24 - No. 22: Stay on solid ground by thinking through any actions before putting them into motion. Try to stay off the "blue haze" by being a more positive person...negative feelings are easily latched onto, positive ones have to be worked upon. Many accidents are sometimes caused by anger and sudden impulsiveness, you are the one damaged the most...suggest you slow down on all levels of personal activities and coast for a while.

EXPANSIVE SAGITTARIUS Nov. 23 - Dec. 21: Take off the "Rose Colored glasses' and look at life fully...the impact will not be too bad. Looking at life without the true factual reasoning may force you into unwise decisions that will reflect back upon you in the future. Young in heart, no matter what age, will be causing you deep concern for their complete lack of good judgement in actions..your sincere guidance for their motivations may fall upon deaf ears...just stand by to help pick up the pieces and glue them back together with love.

ZEALOUS CAPRICORN Dec. 22 - Jan. 29: Nervousness is not for you...a person so well adjusted can't afford the negative feelings to get to them. Others about you may appear to be disinterested in your project, feelings or whatever, so what! Take care of yourself, selfish? don't think so...just smart. Opposition from the partner will open your eyes to help you reorganize your "M.O." Career opportunities are opening up for you on all sides...suggest you choose which course you are going to take as there are a myriad of avenues to walk towards success and walk you will to success!

EXTRAORDINARY AQUARIUS Jan 21. - Feb. 19: Close family could be causing you deep personal concern. These loved ones are also full of feelings which they are trying to establish in this hearty world of survival. Guide, counsel, above all try not to push them into anything or away from anything of import to them as they will sorely resent you and anything you present will be lost from resentment. Females may be playing a more prominent place in your life than in the past...watch gossip about their aid to you. Truth is what is important but everyone doesn't see it that way.

MYSTERIOUS PICES Feb. 20 - March 20: Financial matters will be giving you concern for their preference in your list of importance in action. The positive approach for Self gratification is not like you but there are times when you need a few happy feelings to give yourself a "pat on the back" after all who earned the loot? You will be meeting some new friends during the summer...they will be quite a different group than you have been "around with" for some time, use this as a stepping stone to rise up in your consciousness. Sadness is not your regular feeling so do not allow even the smallest luxury of negativity to penetrate your shield of protection....all in all you have a terrific week coming.

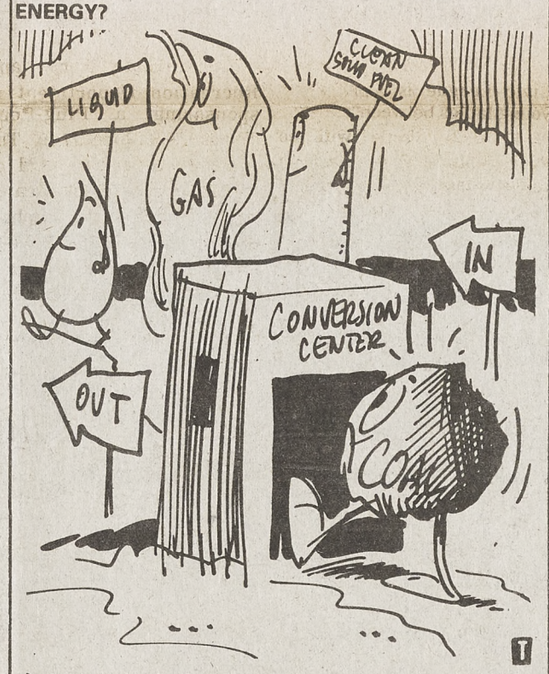
QUESTIONS ABOUT THE ENERGY ISSUE WERE SOLICITED FROM PEOPLE-ON-THE-STREET IN SIX MAJOR CITIES BY GULF OIL CORPORATION. HERE IS ONE OF THE QUESTIONS:

▶ WHAT ARE THE OIL COMPANIES DOING TO GET US ALTERNATE SOURCES OF ENERGY?



▶ ANSWER: Gulf and other companies are working on almost every known substitute for crude oil and other energy sources. The most promising is nuclear energy for utilities, the development of coal resources, and the conversion of coal to gas, liquids and clean solid fuels.

Trade Club services businesses

An unusual business organization, the United Trade Club of Monterey County, permits member firms to buy goods and services without the use of cash.

Established just under a year ago with headquarters in Carmel, the Monterey UTC unit totals more than 70 small and medium-size business firms in Carmel, Monterey, Seaside, Carmel Valley and Salines.

It is patterned after the original United Trade Club of Santa Clara County, whose trade network now includes chapters in San Mateo County, the East Bay area and newly-opened UTC chapters in San Francisco and Marin counties.

Concept of the United Trade Club, largest and most successful organization of its type in Northern California, is patterned after the ancient barter system.

Members, without using their cash, trade goods and services among themselves. For instance, a jeweler in Carmel in need of carpeting for his store buys it from a club member business. Then the carpeting firm, with the credit it has accumulated, may purchase, without cash, auto repairs, printing, janitorial service, photography, flowers, available through member organizations.

Every member is issued a specific line of credit when he joins the United Trade Club. When his sales exceed his purchases by an amount specified by the UTC, he goes on "reserve" until he buys a certain amount of retail goods or services from other members.

"All bills paid through UTC transactions are paid with new business," said Julie Dillon, Monterey County UTC trade director.

Among other businesses currently listed in the Monterey UTC Director are TV and appliance stores, a health club, telephone answering service, photography, party fishing, car radio and stereo sales and service and professional services.

"Thanks to our UTC membership, we have been able to enhance our position among our competitors by virtue of the large UTC membership which we can draw upon to increase our sales," said David Wheeler of Wines of California, Carmel Valley.

Two other Monterey County members who find the Trade Club a boon to their businesses are Kramer Bros. Jewelers, Monterey, and Kane and Zech, a Television and Appliance firm in Salinas.

"Trading without use of cash is a definite benefit to our business," said Len Green, Kramer Bros. Jewelers. "Our sales have even expanded outside our normal service area as we have UTC members buying here from the San Jose area," he said.

"I find young, aggressive and honest businessmen in UTC, which is a plus factor for all members buying and selling in the club," said Jim Kane, president-general manager of Kane and Zech. "Membership has definitely expanded our business."

All accounting work is computerized at the main San Jose headquarters office which issues detailed statements each month to all businesses, showing all current purchases, sales and credit balances. All UTC members are issued plastic credit cards similar to other credit cards.

Keeping the trade club functioning is a 3 per cent cash charge on all member sales.

Majority of members in Monterey County utilize UTC for both business and personal uses.

"I use UTC quite a bit for personal purchases," said David Hunter of Viking Sales, a Carmel gift shop. "We have two new big Monterey customers who had never bought anything at our store until they became UTC members," he said.

Members point out several big advantages of UTC membership. They include savings of cash flow, addition of new business, creation of new cash business through added business exposure and referrals, and stimulation of business during recessionary periods.

Overall, the United Trade Club has logged several million dollars in sales by its more than 900 members since its founding four years ago, by George Maddux, UTC owner-director.

LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS

If you're traveling to England bear in mind that the mother tongue seems to have become somewhat tangled in the transportation. Here are a few differences you should be aware of, old chap:

1 Going Up. An elevator is a lift and you need it to get to the first floor since the first floor is known as the ground floor, and the second floor is called the first floor and so on.

2. Staying Up. Suspenders are braces and garters are suspenders.

3. Sitting Down. In the theatre, orchestra seats are called stalls.

4. Being Down. What's called an underground (or tube) is really a subway; what's called a subway is really an underground passage (or underground tube).

5. Going On. Car trunks, and sometimes people's shoes, are referred to as boots. Car hoods are bonnets and cars run on petrol, not gas.

6. Staying In. In England, as in America and all over the world, the words for a great, comfortable, reasonably priced motor hotel are Holiday Inn where the traveler is assured of American style courtesy, comfort, and convenience mixed with the charm of the country he's in.

It's a place that's really "cheery-o!"

Portions of national forest in Monterey County closed to public

Closures are now in effect on Los Padres National Forest, Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, and a hazardous fire area has been declared on private lands protected by the California Division of Forestry within the southwestern portion of Monterey County.

Damage caused to vegetation by the unusually heavy snowfall in January of 1974 poses a critical fire hazard. Large volumes of dead limbs, broken tree tops, and brush have formed layers of forest fuel on the gound several feet deep. Fire protection managers view this dense forest floor cover within the national forest, militarv reservation, and on private lands as an extreme fire hazard condition.

Effective June 6, areas of the Monterey district of the Los Padres National Forest will be closed to public use. These closures will include:

--The entrance to the Paloma Ridge access road for the upper and lower Piney Creek campgrounds.

--The area from the forest boundary at the Arroyo Seco guard station east of the Arroyo Seco-Indians Road to Horse Bridge and all the land east of the Arroyo Seco River at Horse Bridge, southeasterly to the Indians Road, and easterly to the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation boundary.

--The area east of the Cone Peak-Nacimiento Summit Road south of the San Antonio River drainage, south to the headwaters of San Miguel Creek and easterly to the military reservation.

--These restrictions do not apply to residents going to and from their homes within the closed areas. All open county and state roads, as well as campgrounds immediately adjacent, are open for use, including trail corridors to the Ventana Wilderness.

The total area, which is considerably less than the 1974 closure, covers some 97,680 acres of National Forest land. The Arroyo Seco–Indians Road, as well as the Hunter Liggett-Coast Route 1, will remain open for public use. Off road access to the closed areas is prohibited.

Approximately 20,500 acres of land on the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation will be closed to public use ranging from Slick Rock Creek north to Forest Creek and west to the national forest boundary. The area north of the Milpitas Fire Road to the northern reservation boudary adjacent to Pine Canyon Road will also be closed.

An additional 170,000 acres of private land under the protection of the California Division of Forestry lying north and east of the Los Padres National Forest has been declared a hazardous fire area. Smoking and building of fires will be prohibited in this area, except at established campgrounds.

Private camping areas at Princess Camp and Miller's Lodge will be excluded from the hazardous fire area. The boundary of the hazardous fire area begins at a point along the north boundary of the Los Padres National Forest, south of the San Clemente Dam, and then north to Mt. Toro; then south along the Toro Ridge to the Arroyo Seco-Greenfield county road; then southerly along the foothills, south of King City to the Jolon Road; and then south to Robinson Canyon area to the eastern boundary of Hunter Liggett Miliary Reservation.

The total area includes a strip approximately three to seven miles wide north and east of the Los Padres National Forest. The approximately 100-mile boundary will be posted with fire hazard signs.

All areas within the Los Padres National Forest, Hunter Liggett Military Reservation, and the private land under California Division of Forestry protection will have increased fire prevention patrols. Fire protection managers state these additional restrictions will remain in effect until fall rains reduce the present hazards.

Similar conditions exist within the Santa Cruz Mountains, and a hazardous fire area designation is now in effect there.

All forest users should inquire at the respective fire protection agency for more specifific details before entering the affected areas.

City conduct survey

home, then the evening group will return," he said. "If no one is there after the second visit, a letter is left on the door with the questionnaire, asking for a response. This can be either mailed or telephoned in to city hall."

City planners hope to be able to get as high a return rate as 50 to 60 per cent; if they get that much response, they will consider the results especially meaningful and valuable. One of the additional uses to which this information will be put in the future is for the county-wide survey which will be made next year; those municipalities that do not contribute to the survey may not share in the results. Thus, Seaside will be prepared to take full advantage of those figures, when they are compiled, Carlson said.

And, for a change, this is one survey that won't be digested by a computer: CETA employes will gather, sort, and interpret the information by hand for compilation into a report to be issued after the survey is completed.
